Supporting Information

Comcast Cable provides organizations and agencies the opportunity to air public service announcements on cable television free of charge. The free broadcast time is made available when Comcast has unsold advertising timeslots.

For July, August and September 2013, the City of Minneapolis has utilized this free airtime to promote the Minneapolis 311 app for smart phones, pet licensing and ranked-choice voting.

The donated airtime varies month-to-month because the unsold slots vary, so the total cannot be tallied until after the public service announcements have aired. Comcast has expressed an interest in continuing to offer donated time slots to the City of Minneapolis for public service announcements in the foreseeable future.
